

Universities & Business Schools

Active Earth is a powerful approach to education for sustainable development that complements academic courses and professional practice. We combine adventure activities with theory and discussion in carefully chosen places of great natural beauty. Our courses empower students to build healthy relationships with others and the Earth in both their personal lives, and present or future careers.

University Programs are tailor-made outdoor programs developed in cooperation with faculty staff, blending sustainability education with adventure activities. We offer academic services to education and training providers wanting support in sustainability education. We integrate social responsibility and ecological sustainability content into existing programs and courses.

The video documentary takes you on a journey exploring EasyDay's educational framework. It introduces you to the philosophy of our work and gives you an insight into the beautiful nature of the Sant Aniol valley, Spain. Join us in our adventures.

Early EasyDays - Canyoning at the Gorge du Llech in 2001. Today we still have great fun when Canyoning. The activity is perfect to learn/teach about emotional development, leadership and ecological awareness.
